

Snacks

at midnight

BIOGRAPHY:

A midnight snack could be thought of in two categories: one as a pre-packaged quick bite, and the second as an improvised meal using ingredients that don't traditionally go together, but boy does it taste and feel good. The latter is where Snacks at Midnight draws inspiration for their sound. With comparisons drawn to Red Hot Chili Peppers, Hippo Campus, Rainbow Kitten Surprise, and even the Grateful Dead, it is clear the band pulls inspiration from many different sounding genres and artists.

The band's origin is a classic one. High school friends Rory Babin (songwriter, lead vox, and rhythm guitar), Giovani Covarrubias (lead guitar), and Nickolaus Harner (bass and vox) founded the band in their Sophomore year. Once they figured out how to play their instruments, they eventually added William Babin (keys and vox) into the group their senior year. One year later they added their first consistent drummer, Gary Stivers. In 2020, the band released their debut album, Mom's Proud, with this lineup. Today, after parting ways with Gary Stivers, Austin Davis has stepped into the role as their drummer. Snacks is working on touring this summer and plan to release their 2nd album by November, 2022.
